On land with the Kingfisher Group

In 2018 London based FireHouse Productions commissioned Prestige Network to provide the interpreting support for a major product launch for their client Kingfisher.

With only a one-week lead-time, the pressure was on to provide 18 interpreters working in three languages for this three-day event.

The event was structured to deliver both an all-of-company corporate presentation to 500 delegates. In parallel there were smaller breakout groups who were being introduced to the impressive range of new products and merchandising techniques on show at this large UK venue.

To facilitate the roving groups, 300 infra-red tour-guide headsets were provided for all non-english speaking delegates.

And with the Prestige Network team on site, ensuring the interpreting teams were fully briefed and in the right place at the right time. Everything progressed smoothly making the event both informative and enjoyable for all concerned.

At sea with Smith & Nephew

Smith & Nephew had chosen a unique conference venue for launching a major international sales conference - Royal Caribbean's Navigator of the Seas.

The challenge was to facilitate parallel-working in the four designated European languages, alongside the teams authoring the English language presentations.

By working with drafts and then reworking as they were harmonised into the finished presentations, the short lead-times were met.

While this took place, interpreters were sourced, selected and verified. The venue was audited for technical compatibility, and the logistics involved in supporting the week-long event were finalised.

Transport of the bulky interpreter equipment, sound and video systems, along with the engineering team from London to Nice was arranged, with fuss-free set up being completed as the 500 delegates boarded the ship.

Our management team took care of every aspect of the planning and implementation, remaining on-board throughout the week-long event, ensuring that the interpreting support was in place for each of the key conferences and for the breakout groups.
